School Partnerships

2010
Summary

Dear Friends of Education:

The Ohio State University maintains many extraordinary partnerships with our state's public schools. Part of the university's land-grant mission is to for us to work throughout the state to apply knowledge in order to benefit the citizens of Ohio. We are pleased to present this volume, which features many of these remarkable partnerships.

The diversity of engagement of Ohio State faculty, staff, and students with schools and neighborhoods across the state is impressive. As you examine this volume, you will note that our partnerships represent work with schools and organizations that serve young children, early adolescents, and older adolescents. Projects with our state's schools have involved numerous types of partnerships, including the provision of training for teachers, working with various health-related organizations, and research to improve student achievement. Equally impressive is the fact that these partnerships occur across so many colleges throughout the university.

This information is prepared and synthesized by the P-12 Project. We are particularly delighted that the Project has transitioned into the College of Education and Human Ecology. Like its predecessors, this volume is being presented in an electronic format that will be available via the Internet; we hope that this will allow for greater access to this resource.

The work represented in this volume is indicative of The Ohio State University's commitment to serving communities across urban, suburban, and rural parts of the state. These partnerships represent just a small portion of the university's dedication to working with the state to address important problems that we face daily. We are particularly grateful to the staff of the P-12 Project, as well as to our Columbus faculty and staff, the faculty and staff at our regional campuses, and OSU Extension for their efforts in this work.

Sincerely,

Cheryl Achterberg, Dean, College of Education and Human Ecology

Eric M. Anderman, Interim Director, School of Educational Policy and Leadership
